The Inflow of Gold.

Washifford, September 1.—In order to make prompt payment for foreign gold buillon, the influx of which has commenced, the treasury department has increased the bullon fund of the New York assay office by the transfer of $20,000,000 in gold coin. It is estimated that there is now on the way from Europe about eight or ten million dollars in foreign gold coin and buillion which will arrive in New York in the course of the next ten days, which will be followed by other large shipments. This bullion, upon its crival at New York, is taken directly from the vession as its value is determined by the assay the depositor is paid fin gold colo without delay, which is quite an important matter in the present state of the money market. A million and a quarter in foreign gold bullion arrived at New York yesterday and was deposited at the assay office.

The South African Wreck.

LONDON, September 1.—In regard to the wreck of the Union company's steamer, Teuton, near Quoin Point, the company has received a telegram announcing that another boat, with the second, third and fourth officers, three seamen, two firemen and a cooley, has arrived at Simonstown. The occupants believe that another boat with thirty women and children may still arrive The steamer Danube goes in search of the survivors. The company hope that the loss of life is not so great as was at first expected. They believe about fifty passengers, for Kuyania, were landed at Capetown to proceed to their destination in a smaller steamer. Most of the passengers were emigrants.

The Cotton Corner in Liverpool.

London, September 1.—Speakman & Son, stock brokers of Manchester, have failed. Their liabilities are estimated at £80,000.

The Manchester Guardian, in its commercial article, this morning, says: "The sales during the mouth of July, in this market, hardly exceeded the average production of s single fortight, and certainly the business of August has, to say, no improvement." The Guardian adds: "We age informed that some hundred of copies of the list of Liverpool firms who are connected with the cotton corner, have been distributed on 'change. This has already had some effect."

Washington, September 1.—The examination of Captain Howgate's affairs continues by the efficient of the government. Sufficient has been stablished in the past few days to show that the mount of his embezziement will reach even aligher figure than $110,000 last reported. Fine rains fell in every part of the northwest on Wednesday, and our dispatches from Chicago show that the downpour has benefited the corn crop, which is by no means matured in that section of the country.

THE debt statement for August brings the gratifying intelligence that we have as a people reduced the national debt in a month something over fourteen million dollars. Such a rate of payment would wipe out the debt of Georgia in about of the bureau of statistics contains some

It is a good sign to see the stalwart leaders rising to explain that they never -no, never-attended a conference at Arthur's house. Logan and Grant have already got in their work on this line, and the country waits to hear from Jones, of Nevada, and the ward politicians.

WE are glad to see that Secretary Hunt has ordered an investigation of the tor necessarily blundered, and as the whole affair was more of a display than a scientific test, it is very proper that an investigation should be had. THE improving condition of the president has revived the subject of his removal from the white house to Long Branch or some other healthy locality, and also the question of calling in Arthur raw cotton, which amounted to $247,695,to temporarily assume executive duties The country is in favor of the former as soon as it can safely be accomplished, but it is opposed to the latter proposition almost unanimously. Mr. Hayes, if we mistake not, was absent nearly four months on the Pacific coast while he was serving out 047,257 in 1881. The following is a table Mr. Tilden's term, and there was no complaint that he was needed in Washington. Another Southern Book. The editor of Scribner's Magazine re centiv called attention to the wonderful increase of literary activity at the south. and gave it as his opinion that the literary school of New England, which has reports of consuls amount, all told, to exercised such a marvelous influence less than the exports of horned cattle or upon the national life and character, of cheese alone, yet it is encouraging to would shortly give way before a compo- note that the value of the exports of site school having its growth and development in the west and south. This is really a hopeful view, and it is justified, not alone by what Mr. Cable or Mrs. Burnett has accomplished, nor by what Mr. Sidney Lanier has given promise of, but in that more general movement which has filled the desk of the editor of Scribner with contributions from the south worthy of consideration, and which is also to be seen and felt in efforts that do not always attract the attention of the public. The editor might also have called attention to the fact that the new literary movement in the south and west is purely and distinctly American. Mrs. Burnett is named as a southern author. Her most notable book, "That Lass of "Lowrie's," although the scene is laid in England and the characters are typically English, is as purely American in method and treatment as the newspaper paragraphs which startle the foreign Philistines who may chance to read them. This increase of literary activity in the south is accompanied by a profound interesting fact that cotton and tobacconstituted over thirty per cent of our total exports of literary activity in the south is accompanied by a profound interesting fact that cotton and tobacconstituted over thirty per cent of our total exports of literary activity in the south is accompanied by a profound interesting fact that cotton and tobacconstituted over thirty per cent of our total exports of merchandise during this increase of literary activity in the belief that the current of gold towards this country will be stopped during the south is accompanied by a profound interest at the north of which enterprising publishers are not slew to take advantage. As a result, we see Osgood, of Boston, whose tact, experience and taste combine to make the ideal publisher we see Gogood making the way easy for southern writers of promise. "Homo-"selle" is not a novel, but a narrative of meeting. Speaking of Ingersoll, did it eve rection in Virginia, an episode which is historically dramatic. The interest of the story centers in Homoselle Despard, a suspiciously romantic name, a young Englishman named Halsey, who is simple minded, splay footed and are suspiciously. simple-minded, splay-footed and an abo-litionist to boot, and a quadroon girl named Chloe, whose resemblance to her named Chloe, whose resemblance to her young mistress is emphasized and dwelt upon in a style which would be pleasanter and more satisfactory were it treated from what might be termed the psychological point of view. How They Parted

How They Parted.

Norristown Herald

A new song is entitled "How They Parted."
We have not read it, but no doubt they parted in the usual way, about 2 a. m., after kissing each other "good night" at least thirty-seven times. "Well, i guess I must go," he says, with a sigh, about two hours before he does go. Then, after another half hour's conversation about one thing and snother, he presses her hand with much pressiveness, says he really must go, and-loving-read another half hour. Then he says he didn't know it was so late, picts up his hat and around her to prevent her falling in a swoon, and kisses her five minutes in one fanleg and—still lingers. Then he gives ber one mere kiss just her beblack, lonesome night, and calls around the next night. That is how they parted years ago—if we have not been misinformed.

-Daniel, the candidate of the Virginia —Daniel, the candidate of the Virginia debt payers, rather startled his opponent Cameron, now the candidate of the repudiators, with whom he is holding public discussions, by reading the declaration that Virginia should "pay to the uttermost farthing, pay to the last pound of flosh and the last drop of blood. Repudiation is robbery—nothing more, nothing less." Then, turning to Cameron, he asked, "Who said this?" and answered the question, pointing to the colonel: "As Nathan said unto David, thou art the man!"

Why do so many people we see around us seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cents we will self them Shloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by all druggists.

Be of Good Cheer.

There is one remedy which has proved itself to be a priceless boon and a true friend to suffering humanity. It has saved thousands of nervous, debilitated, headaching mortals to lives of usefulness and full enjoyment of robust health. If you are weak, nervous and debilitated or suffer from inducation and dyspepsia, you make a serious mistake and do yourself great injustice if you fail to try this excellent medicine. You will find it a perfect panacea for all your troubles. In a few weeks time your shattered nervous system will be restored to a natural and healthful condition, all symptoms of dyspepsia and indigestion disappear, and the possibility of paralysis, apoplexy, and other disorders that lead to sudden death, will be removed forever. This meritorious compound is a preparation of Iron and essential vegetable tonics. It is the only preparation of Iron that does not give headache or blacken the teeth. It is called Brown's Iron Bitters. Domand it of your druggist, and take no substitute. It will give the greatest satisfaction, for its ef-

J. P. Stevens & Co's. 34 Whitehall Street. EDITORS CONSTITUTION: The people generally do not appreciate the actual shortness of the corn and peas crops that are now maturing. In the five states, from North Carolina to Alabama, the acrearg in provision crops is less than that in 1880, and on this decreased acreage tha yield per acre of corn will be only three-fourths and of peas one-half of an average, Middle and upper South Carolina and northern Georgia have sustained the heaviest injury to the corn crop, and in these sections the yield will not exceed a half, or about five bushels per acre, where ten should have been gathered. Under these circumstances all farmers should plant abundant crops of oats, both for grazing during the winter, and food for their stock after next May. The red rust-proof oat is the greatest boon that has lately proof oat is the greatest boon that has lately een vouchsafed the south, and enables the been voccosaided the south, and enables the thrifty farmer to feed his animals for one-fourth the cost of a corn and fodder diet. This variety will always make a crop, but the common gray out nearly always a fail-ure, and the losses of many Georgia farmers last spring were attributable to the fact Every farmer should sow down, in oats, ten acres of land for every work animal on his place. Such a proportionate acreage will produce enough of the cheapest and strongest food, to last twelve months, and also ample seed for the next fall; and, after the middle of May, will obviate all neces sity for corn, except for human food. The average yield of oats per acre, in Georgia is 15 bushels, which cost to plant, and harvest about 15 cents per bushel, and where the yield is as much as twenty five bushels, the cost is only 10 cents. Tois latter is just one fourth of that per bushel for making corr, when the yield is up to the sverage of 10 bushels.

"How farmers can feed their atock most chesply" is a problem that the exposition will endeavor to solve by ensitage; but while this may be well for those who have capital, an abundant oat crop is the most practicable solution for our average farmers who have no ready money.

LESS A CHIN. Near Smyrns, on the Western and At-antic railroad, there occurred a horrible accident yesterday morning.

Just this side of the station a squad of hands was engaged repairing the track, and it was one of these to whom the accident happened.

Betweens7 and 8 o'clock the accommodation train known as the "goober" came along and as it neared the place where the hands were working they ceased their labors and stepped off the track in order to allow the train to pass. Among the force was a white man who had been handling a crow bar. When he stepped off he carried the bar in his hand. After reaching the side of the track he turned around and placing one end of the bar on the ground rested upon it looking at the approaching train. In taking this position the man placed the end of the bar so near the track that the engine in passing struck it, driving it against the man's chin with such force that the entire lower jaw was torn away leaving his tongue and the upper part of his mouth exposed fully to view.

The train was stopped and the injured man, whose name could not be learned, but aboard and carried to his home at Vinings, where he was at last accounts suf-

That May Result in Death. Mr. Loyd M. Morse fell from a second story window, in the Brown building, next to the Merchants' bank, on Alabama street, and received injuries that may result in

As to the exact cause of the sad accider As to the exact cause of the sad accident there is considerable doubt. About half past nine Mr. J. H. Wynn, who rooms on the second floor of the building started to his room and in passing the window in the end of the hall near the railroad saw some one sitting in it. At a glance Mr. Wynn saw that the person was asleep, and fearing that he might tumble out, went up to and awoke him. To Mr. Wynn's question, "Do you know where you are?" the gentleman, whom he recognized as Mr. Morse, said, "Yes; leave me alone;" and Mr. Wynn passed on, leaving Mr. Morse in the window.

passed on, leaving Mr. Morse in the window.

About half-past ten several gentlemen who were standing in front of the National hotel heard a heavy fall in the direction of Thompson's restaurant, and fearing that some one had been hurt started over to ascertain, but just as they reached the opposite side of the street they met a boy, who said that a man had been killed by falling from a window.

Near the building they also saw several men bending over something which proved to be the bleeding form of a man. No one seemed to know hin, but soon Mr. Joe Nail, of the Atlanta postoffice, came up and recogn zed him as Mr. Morse, a former postal c crk. As soon as possible the injured man was picked up and carried to a room on the third floor of the building from which he had fallen, where his injuries were examined by Dr. Nicoison. It was found that his left hip was badly dislocated, and that a severe wound on the top of the head had been received. The distance from the window to the ground was about twenty-five feet, and the escape from instant death was miraculous. The room to which Mr. Morse was taken was Mr. Andrews's, a 'friend of Mr. Morse, and it is thought'that he was waiting for his friend when he sat down in the window, and going to sleep fell out. When picked up Morse was unconscious and remained so for several hours. After examining and dressing the wound on the head, Jr. Nic-trust confided to him, Colonel Mott was faithful and true to that devolved upon him. As a trustee of this asylum, having through his long life been engaged in many various employments, he brought to a discharge of his duties a ripe and most valuable experience and intelligence, which could be found united in few, if in any other one man, in the state. His zeal, energy, and constant application to his duty as trustee, with all his strong native faculties, acute and unimpaired by age, were almost unbounded, as, having retured from life in a great degree, he gave a large part of his time to advancing the interests of this institution, paying it frequent visits, and in art ways in his power aiding the superintendenand other officers, by his advice and suggestions, in their weighty labor and responsibility of providing, caring for, and administering to the large number, nearly one thousand, of helpless and diseased patients committed to their charge.

Resolved, therefore, That in the death of Colonel Randolph L. Mott, the state has lost one of her oldest, most useful and respected citizens, and this institution a trustee and friend, who for the eight years he was connected with it, rendered the most valuable service thereto, and set an example of zeal and elemestness, in its interests, well worth the following of all future trustees.
